GUIDING QUESTION
How have voting rights evolved in Canada?

OVERVIEW
The right to vote has been withheld from many groups throughout history based on gender, race and religion. Universal suffrage is the right of all citizens to vote in elections and it took decades of people and groups campaigning for equality for this to be achieved.

In this lesson, students reflect on democratic rights in Canada, as well as the importance of equality, political tolerance and citizen participation in a democracy. After reviewing an overview of history of voting rights in Canada, students form groups to investigate the actions of individuals and groups that contributed to universal suffrage and improved accessibility to voting. In the culminating discussion, students reflect on the importance of exercising their right to vote and protecting minority rights.

LEARNING GOALS
By the end of this lesson, students will be able to:
• Explore issues related to personal and societal rights and responsibilities (Citizen Education Framework – Attributes);
• Use the concept of cause and consequence to explain the actions of individuals and groups which led to universal suffrage in Canada;
• Work in a collaborative and critically thoughtful manner with their peers to gather, analyze and communicate research;
• Assess the historical significance of the pathway to universal suffrage in Canada and democracy today;
• Develop attitudes that foster electoral participation and civic engagement (Citizen Education Framework – Attributes).

SUCCESS CRITERIA
• I can explain the democratic rights we have in Canada and what they mean for Canada’s democracy;
• I can use the concept of cause and consequence to explain the actions and impact of individuals and groups which led to universal suffrage in Canada;
• I can work collaboratively with my peers to research, analyze and effectively communicate information;
• I can use the concept of historical significance to analyze the universal suffrage movement;
• I can explain the importance of voting and/or being an active citizen.

CURRICULUM LINKS
Overall Expectations
A1. Historical Inquiry: use the historical inquiry process and the concepts of historical thinking when investigating aspects of Canadian history since 1914

B2. Communities, Conflict, and Cooperation: analyse some key interactions within and between different communities in Canada, and between Canada and the international community, from 1914 to 1929, and how they affected Canadian society and politics

B3. Identity, Citizenship, and Heritage: explain how various individuals, organizations, and specific social changes between 1914 and 1929 contributed to the development of identity, citizenship, and heritage in Canada

C1. Social, Economic, and Political Context: describe some key social, economic, and political events, trends, and developments between 1929 and 1945, and assess their impact on different groups in Canada

D1. Social, Economic, and Political Context: describe some key social, economic, and political events, trends, and developments in Canada between 1945 and 1982, and assess their significance for different groups in Canada

E1. Social, Economic, and Political Context: describe some key social, economic, and political events, trends, and developments in Canada from 1982 to the present, and assess their significance for different groups in Canada

Specific Expectations
A1.5 use the concepts of historical thinking when analysing, evaluating evidence about, and formulating conclusions and/or judgements regarding historical issues, events, and/or developments in Canada since 1914

B2.4 explain the goals and accomplishments of some groups and/or movements that contributed to social and/or political cooperation during this period

B3.1 explain how some individuals, groups, and/or organizations contributed to Canadian society and politics during this period and to the development of identity, citizenship, and / or heritage in Canada

C1.4 describe the main causes of some key political developments and/or government policies in Canada during this period, and assess their impact on different groups in Canada
LESSON 8: UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

D1.4 describe some key political developments and/or government policies in Canada during this period, and assess their significance for different groups in Canada.

E1.4 describe some key political developments and/or government policies that have affected Indigenous peoples in Canada since 1982, and assess their significance for First Nations, Métis, and Inuit individuals and communities.

MINDS ON

1. Ask students if they know what democratic rights we have in Canada. In summary, our democratic rights include our ability to participate in political activities and to have a democratic form of government.

There are three related sections in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms:

- SECTION 3: Every Canadian citizen, 18 years of age or older, has the right to vote in a government election, and become a candidate and serve as an elected representative.
- SECTION 4: Governments must hold elections at least every five years.
- SECTION 5: An annual sitting of legislatures is required as a minimum (elected representatives must at least once per year).

2. In addition to democratic rights, other aspects contribute to Canada’s democracy. Review the principles of democracy (Handout 3.3) and connect our democratic rights to specific principles of democracy (equality rights, bills of rights, free and fair elections, citizen participation, political tolerance). Even in a democratic country such as Canada there have been times when one or more of these principles have not been upheld or they have been limited to specific individual or groups. It is important for students to understand that democratic rights are limited when principles of democracy are not upheld or equally applied.

3. Facilitate a discussion about voting rights and democratic principles.
   - Why is equality important in a democracy?
   - Why is political tolerance vital for democracy?
   - Why is citizen participation essential in a democracy?
   a) Give students time to reflect on the questions and consider events they have studied previously in the course (e.g., first wave feminist movement, War Measures Act, internment of specific groups, disenfranchisement of specific groups over time, historical citizen participation to bring about change).
   b) Divide students into groups of three and assign each group member one specific question to investigate and then share findings with their group.
   c) Give groups time to discuss all three questions.
   d) Conclude by having a class discussion on the three questions.

Teacher Note: Be sensitive to issues at home that may challenge perspectives around democratic participation, such as religious reasons or traditions followed by certain groups.

ACTION

1. Explain to students that the right to vote in Canada has not always been universal. Many groups have been excluded throughout history based on gender, race and religion. Watch the ‘Right to Vote’ video and review Handout 8.1.

Video clarification: Although women, gained the right to vote by 1918, there were still many exclusions due to race, ethnic origin and religion. Universal suffrage for all women was not achieved until 1960.

Teacher Note: Review the concept of historical significance: This historical thinking concept requires students to determine the importance of something (an issue, event, development, person, place, interaction) from the past. Historical importance is determined generally by the impact of something on a group of people and whether its effects are long lasting. Students develop their understanding that something that is historically significant for one group may not be significant for another. Significance may also be determined by the relevance of something from the past and how it connects to a current issue or event.

2. Divide the class into groups to research the major developments in the history of voting rights in Canada. Groups could focus on one particular time period or be assigned a specific group, within or across time periods. For example:
   - Strand B (1914-1929) – Women’s suffrage movement (1916-1918)
   - Strand B (1914-1929) – 1920 Dominion Elections Act (1920)
   - Strand E (1982-present) – Persons with disabilities
   - Strand E (1982-present) – Inmates and prisoners

Using Handout 8.1 as a starting point, have each group conduct research into which historical action or condition was most responsible for their designated group achieving the right to vote.

   - How notable was the event at the time? What was the impact on the time period?
   - How widespread and lasting were the consequences? Is it still significant today?
   - How symbolic or representative of historical issues or trends were the consequences?
   - How does it help us understand why voting rights evolved in Canada?
3. Have groups share their research through a classroom presentation or through a jigsaw method where findings are shared within groups. Depending on the method used, the presentation could incorporate different multi-media formats or be shared through a skit.

4. Through a closing discussion, have students rank the significance of the events based on the criteria and the research from the above action item. Ask students to consider the following questions to help justify their rankings:
   - How does each group’s pathway to suffrage compare or differ?
   - Were suffrage movements linked to one another? If so, how?

Teacher Note: Review the concept of cause and consequence with students. This concept requires students to determine the factors that affected or led to something (e.g., voting rights for different groups at different times) and its impact/effects. Students develop an understanding of the complexity of causes and consequences, learning that something may be caused by more than one factor and may have many consequences, both intended and unintended.

CONSOLIDATION
Select one of the following activities to consolidate the learning. Give students the choice of which one they would like to complete. The activities can be completed in small groups or individually, depending on available time. The completed task should be shared with the whole class, through a gallery walk or pairing students or groups to present their completed tasks.

1. Choose one moment that you think marked the most important turning point for voting rights and Canadian democracy. Make two arguments to support your choice.

2. Read the parliamentary debates from the women’s suffrage era and the arguments made by Members of Parliament against granting women the right to vote. Ask students to write a rebuttal to one or more of the members outlining two reasons why women should have the same voting rights as men.

“The case against ‘woman suffrage’” (The Toronto Star, October 11, 2008)

Selected quotes:
“...I say that woman suffrage implies not only the casting of the ballot, but the entering of women into the field of politics. Politics is modified war. There is struggle, strife, contention, bitterness, heart-burning, excitement and agitation, all things which are out of harmony with the true character of womanhood.” (Rodolphe Lemieux, Liberal MP, Gaspé, Quebec)

“...Far from being a step forward for women, this so-called emancipation will mean disaster to those on whose behalf it is granted, as well as to the nation at large. Let us consider the social position of women in the state. Everywhere they are tendered respect, admiration, attention; in a word, they are idealized. This admiration is extended to them because we all recognize their sublime mission; that is to say, the moral and intellectual development of our children. I believe that it is a dangerous experiment to take them away from our homes.” (Marie-Joseph Demers, Liberal MP, St. John’s-Iberville, Newfoundland)

“...Woman’s place is not at political rallies, on election committees or in the polling booth. The ideal spot for woman is the family fireside. Isn’t she, in all truth, the angel of the hearth?” (Joseph-Emile D’Anjou, Liberal MP, Rimouski, Quebec)

“The reward offered the women of Canada by the Prime Minister will become the instrument of their torture and the cause of their downfall. It will injure women physically. Who shall say that at all times they will be equal to the excitements of caucus rows, campaign slanders, briberies, inflammable speeches, torch parades and balloting on stormy days?” (Charles Fournier, Liberal MP, Bellechasse, Quebec)

“The physiology of woman, the anatomy of woman, reveals that she is in this world for the purpose of love and motherhood and not for the purpose of political strife.” (Jean-Joseph Denis, Liberal MP, Joliette, Quebec)
ASSessment Ideas
Ask students to individually answer the following question for assessment (either formative or summative).

Question: What has been the most historically significant event contributing to universal suffrage in Canada?

The following outlines important events in the history of voting rights in Canada.

British North America – Only Wealthy Men May Vote (1758-1866)

Early in Canada’s history individuals had to own property or pay a certain amount in yearly taxes or rent to be able to vote. Only a small number of people qualified, mostly wealthy Protestant men. Women and most religious and ethnic minority groups did not have democratic rights.

Extending the Right to Vote to Women (1867-1919)

Starting in the 1870s, women campaigned with petitions, speeches and public protests for the right to vote. Even though politicians and many others disagreed, these women received the support of powerful organizations. They managed to have bills introduced in provincial legislatures. When the bills were defeated, they continued their efforts and had them reintroduced until they were successful.

Manitoba was the first province to extend the vote to women in 1916. Other provinces followed shortly thereafter, including Ontario in 1917. By 1918, women gained the right to vote in federal elections. It is important to note, that although women achieved suffrage based on gender during this period, there were still many exclusions due to race, ethnic origin and religion.

Making the Vote Universal (1920-1960)

The right to vote became more accessible with the 1920 Dominion Elections Act, yet inequality remained. Indigenous peoples and Canadian citizens of Chinese origin and Japanese origin were also denied the right to vote, even if they had served in the Canadian military. Indigenous peoples could only vote if they gave up their treaty rights and registered Indian status. Religious groups were also treated unfairly. After much protest and debate, all groups were given the right to vote in 1960.

Accessibility for All (1961-1997)

More steps were taken to make voting easier and more accessible.

- Employers had to give their staff enough time off during the day to vote.
- Voting hours were made longer.
- People could vote in advance on certain days.
- People could vote by mail. This is used by students living away from home, people who are travelling, people in jail and for people living outside the country.
- Voting places are now selected based on access for wheelchairs. New voting tools and extra help were offered to voters. Such as magnifiers to help read ballots, Braille ballots and large-print ballots. Sign language was also provided.
- Voting places were set up at certain locations to make it easier for some people to vote (e.g., colleges, universities).
- Information for voters was made available in more languages.
- Learning programs were created to help people become more aware about how to vote.

Charter Challenges (1982 to 2004)

The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms was created to protect our rights and freedoms. It has helped several groups force changes to election laws.

- Federal judges could not vote in federal elections until 1988. It was a court decision that changed this law.
- In 1993, election laws were changed to allow people who have a mental illness to vote.
- Prisoners were able to vote starting in 1993. However, their sentence had to be less than two years.
- In 2002, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that prisoners serving terms of more than two years could not be excluded. They have been able to cast ballots since 2004.
